Asexual people and Intimate Partner Violence

A guide for LGBTQ+ people

What is Intimate Partner Violence?

Intimate partner violence is a pattern of behaviors that are used to gain control and power over someone and it can affect anyone and everyone. People from any race, class, gender identity, age, sexual orientation, religion, or status can be affected. It is not always easy to recognize intimate partner violence and abusive behaviors, however knowing some of the warning signs can help save yourself or someone you care about. Remember, it is not your fault for being a survivor of intimate partner violence

Common Abuse Tactics

These are ways an abuser may try to gain control. Some of these may manifest in ways that may look a little different, however it's important to be aware of possible signs of abuse.

- Telling you that you can never do anything right
- Being jealous when you are with friends and family or spending time with other people
- Controlling finances and/or giving you an allowance
- Preventing you from making your own decisions
- Intimidation with weapons
- Pressuring you to use drugs or alcohol
Pressuring you to have sex or do things you are not comfortable with

What does it look like in relationships?

- Saying there is something wrong with you because you are asexual
- Telling you that there is something wrong with your body and its why you are asexual
- Ridiculing your body
- Threatening to “out” you to employer, friends, or family
- Forbidding you to talk to other asexual people, talk about asexual topics, or attending support groups
- Belittling your identity
- Touching body parts that you do not want to be touched
- Calling you offensive names

“I didn't know why they would make mean comments about my identity. It made me feel isolated.” —Anonymous

Remember, abuse is about power and control. The abuser may seek out weaknesses to exploit them. You are not to blame for intimate partner violence. There is nothing you could do differently to change the way an abuser treats you. What is important is to be aware of the warning signs and find ways to keep yourself safe and healthy.

Ways to keep safe

When Non-binary survivors seek services there can be barriers that are faced. However, everyone is entitled to services. VAWA 2013 added protection for gender identity and sexual orientation. This means, your identity is not a reason to stop you from seeking services. You may still encounter people who may not understand your identity full however the resources are available to you.

Safety planning

Safety planning is a way to help keep you safe. It allows for you to plan ways to navigate different situations that keep your safety a priority. Here are a few things that safety planning covers:

- Safety during and abusive incident
- Safety in your home
- Safety at work
- Safety in public
- Safety when preparing to leave
- Internet safety
- Safety with a protective order
- Creating a safety network
- What should I take with me if I leave?
- Important documents to have
